Faculty Spotlight: Lori Amy, Ph.D.

This installment of Faculty Spotlight features Lori Amy, Ph.D., professor in the Department of Writing and Linguistics in the College of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences. Amy has spent a great deal of time in Albania, where she has researched the ways that its people have survived war and trauma under a communist regime. Amy has also co-founded a new non-governmental organization called OTTONomy, which will allow Georgia Southern students to experience Albanian culture.

A Day for Southern kicks off this week

All faculty and staff are invited to A Day for Southern on-campus this Thursday, Sept. 1, at 8:30 a.m. on Sweetheart Circle. The ADFS volunteer from your area will be providing you with your ADFS information so that you can attend the kick-off and cast your "vote" early before the Sept. 9 deadline. Hear from Dr. Hebert, students and staff, enjoy breakfast refreshments and register for drawings including season tickets to the Performing Arts Center, football season tickets, service at Meraki Salon and more!

Every dollar you pledge is a "vote" for Southern! See you on the Circle at 8:30 a.m.!
